THE HISTORY

The Werdertorgasse 5-7 ensemble was built in 1869/1870 on behalf of textile manufacturer Mayr Mandl by the renowned architect Ludwig Zettl, who also played an important role on the City Expansion Commission in planning the Vienna Ringstrasse area. Originally, the Gründerzeit house served as residential and commercial buildings.

Entrepreneur Mayr Mandl already employed several hundred tailors in the 1840s, who produced ready-to-wear items for sale in Hungary and the Balkans. In the Crimean War, he gained prestige as a supplier for the Ottoman army. In 1858, Mandl founded Austria's first clothing factory in which he produced men's clothes. In the 1860s, the Mandl family established itself as part of Vienna's high society. By the beginning of the 20th century, several members of the dynasty had already amassed a fortune of millions.

Werdertorgasse was named in 1864 after the former Werdertor, a gate in the Babenberg city wall. The "Alte Werdertor" was located a few hundred metres closer to the city centre, and the "Neue Werdertor" or "Neutor" was built in the middle of the 13th century, exactly where the Werdertorgasse 5-7 property is located today.

The name "Werd" comes from Middle High German and denoted the former river islands in the Danube.

VIENNA'S FIRST DISTRICT

The exclusive boutiques, the old Viennese taverns, the little park around the corner or the internationally renowned museum: In Vienna's 1st district, right in the heart of the city, these are all next to each other. The elegant fin-de-siècle stately buildings and the cosmopolitanism of a modern city are no contradiction, they complement each other harmoniously. It is the relaxation that distinguishes the city centre from many comparable city centres in other metropolises - the first district, with its imposing squares, small, winding alleyways and lovingly maintained parks, is something of a promenade. And yet modern and in keeping with the times. The first district is not only the district of international high culture, but also a comfortable living environment that combines tradition with modernity.

In the city centre, in addition to numerous traditional coffee houses, exclusive international restaurants or elegant bars, down-to-earth inns can still be found. Whether it's a sea bass fillet at the city's elegant Italian or a Wiener Schnitzel at a tavern, in the city centre there is everything you could want, depending on your desire and mood. And all this can be reached on foot, the short distances are part of the quality of life in the city. This also applies to the city's many sights.
